

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method and composition for reducing highly sensitive C-reactive protein to improve the vision of a user is achieved through the daily administration of a leukotriene inhibitor, and antihistamine and a corticosteroid. The composition may be administered singly or as a single medicament. Typically, the leukotriene inhibitor and antihistamine are administered orally and the steroid nasally infused.